UNIVERSITY OF CALGARY

Community Volunteers Needed –
Join Our Animal Care Committees!

The University of Calgary welcomes ongoing applications from community members interested in serving on our Animal Care Committees. These committees help ensure that animals used in research and teaching are treated ethically and in accordance with high standards of welfare and care.

Applications are accepted throughout the year, and positions are filled as vacancies or committee needs arise.

As a Community Representative, you'll:

- Provide an independent community perspective
- Represent community interests
- Help provide balance and credibility in decisions about animal-based research and education

Who can apply:

- Calgary and area residents, age 18+
- Individuals with no prior experience with animals used for scientific purposes
- Individuals with no affiliation with the University of Calgary

What you can expect:

- Attend monthly meetings, primarily virtually
- Review animal use protocols
- Commit approximately 4–6 hours per month

Why volunteer?

Make a meaningful contribution to decisions that uphold strong standards of animal care and ethical research, while helping strengthen transparency and accountability in animal care oversight.
